

GBVF Stakeholders and Organisations

The focus area of your project will impact the leadership stakeholders to reach out to, but on any End GBVF 100-Day Challenge, you should at least speak to the organisations marked in BOLD. Also, consider others on the list and identify key roleplayers in your community that are not on the list.

Government Stakeholders

- South African Police Service (SAPS) - GBVF Response Units and Family Violence, Child Protection, and Sexual Offenses (FCS) Units
 - Department of Social Development (DSD)
 - Department of Women, Youth, and Persons with Disabilities (DWYPD)
 - Department of Justice and Constitutional Development - Courts and Thuthuzela Care Centres (TCCs)
 - Department of Basic Education (DBE)
 - Department of Higher Education and Training (DHET)
 - Municipality - Including gender and safety officials and managers and local GBVF task teams like the Rapid Response teams and Gender Forums
 - Department of Health
 - Traditional Leadership Structures
-

Civil Society Organizations

- Shelter and Save houses in your area
 - Legal Centres
 - NGOs, for example - Tears Foundation, Lifeline South Africa, Sonke Gender Justice, People Opposing Women Abuse (POWA)
 - Community-based organisations (CBOs), such as local NGOs and women's groups, are active at the community level.
 - Faith-Based Organizations (FBOs)
 - Funders of grassroots GBVF initiatives, for example, Hlanganisa Community Fund
 - Development agencies like the UN
-

Private Sector Stakeholders

- Corporate Social Investment (CSI) Programs
- Business Coalitions for example, Business Unity South Africa (BUSA) and the GBVF Private Sector Response Fund.
- Media Companies such as your local newsletter, radio station or TV
- Security Companies
- Healthcare Providers or clinics that specialise in services for GBVF survivors, including trauma counselling.
- Taxi associations